THE POPES ENCYCLICAL AND PUBLIC EDUCATION

Rabbi Maurice N. Eisendrath

The recent encyclical, issued by the Pope to the effect that to the Catholic Church has been entrusted the divine and inviolable right to the education of the young and that all Catholic parents, if they be true to their mother church, must enroll their children in the Catholic parochial schools, has stirred the entire religious world and has evoked a storm of varied comment. Quite naturally those of liberal temper see in this drastic demand a threat to the emancipation of the human mind from the throes of superstitious enslavement which release they believe can be gained through free public education alone. Such statements as "Education belongs preeminently to the church for two supernatural reasons which God himself conferred conclusively on her and which therefore are absolutely superior to other reasons of a natural order. . . At the same time as a mandate to teach Christ conferred infallibility in the educative work of His Church . . . therefore God himself made the church participate in His living educative mission, rendering it by Divine intervention immune from error. Hence the church is the supreme teacher of men and her right to teach is inherent and inviolable," cannot but bring terror to the hearts of those who remember well a Galileo crouching abjectly before the purple robed cardinals who compelled him to recant a doctrine not quite as fallible as the dogma that the Church had "infallibly" taught, or a Giordano Bruno burned at the stake for similar "heresies" now become outworn orthodoxies. Such enlightened individuals will rise in every part of the earth to resist an educational system claiming for itself infallibility in a world where so little as yet is known or certain to man's finite and dawning intelligence.

But ere we listen to those who vent with loudest voice their wrath against the Catholic Church for quite openly and frankly expressing its educational policy and purpose, we must remind ourselves that there are other forces equally as dangerous to the growing intellectual emancipation of mankind; forces which are much more furtive, subtle, and insidious in their machinations. Thus we have the phenomenon, originating not by any means in Catholic circles, of lobbyists in almost every state of the United States, at least, who seek through subterranean political connivance to pass anti-evolution bills, to introduce doctrinal religious instruction and Bible readings into the public schools which, because it is less openly confessed, is an even graver obstacle to free instruction than the Papal Encyclical which has just been issued from Rome. It were well ere the chorus of condemnation become too blatant and thunderous that the still, small voice, whispering "Physician, heal thyself!" be heeded.

And even outside of religion altogether, there are factors which threaten to shatter to splinters the structure of liberal education in our day. Economic, political, social influences are everywhere seeking to indoctrinate our young solely with a philosophy and a point of view that will substantiate the status quo and stand as an impregnable fortress against any possible progress or change. A glaring instance of this flagrant evil of our time was brought to light in Toronto during the past week when Professor Irwin, of the Semitics Department of the Toronto University, scathingly attacked this institution as being "mildewed with discretion" and honeycombed with caution. Now, we have too recently arrived in this community to comment on this specific charge, but we have personally encountered a sufficient number of dismissals from American Colleges and Universities, because of the expression of certain unpopular economic or social theories (in accord, however, with the finest religious idealism to which those same institutions pay lip homage in Commencement addresses and baccalaureate lectures), to believe that Professor Irwin knows whereof he speaks, if not with regard to his particular institution, then with regard to the general academic situation in which such lack of moral support and economic coercion undeniably do exist. We have read a sufficient number of pages of Upton Sinclair's "The Goose Step" and "The Goslings" and we have enough confidence in this writer's integrity to believe—his occasional exaggeration notwithstanding—that his conclusions are well founded. They establish the fact, beyond the shadow of a doubt, that throughout the United States at least (and we fervently hope that the same is not true of Canada), the professors and teachers from the Kindergartens of the Public Schools through the Graduate Schools of our finest Universities, live in constant dread of the economic, religious and political domination which fetters their minds and stifles their souls. We recall likewise the exposure a year or so ago of the vast sums of money expended by Public Utilities to print text books, to hire lecturers, and to employ professors who were quite willing to prostitute their God given intelligences and to sell their divine spirits for a mess of golden pottage, that the "bolshevistic" doctrine of public ownership might be successfully and summarily dissipated from the American mind. Certain it is, therefore, that mighty powers exist that seek constantly to standardize our professors, stultify their private opinions, indoctrinate our youth and thus rivet us all to a vicious cycle that whirls ever round and round and round the self-same orbit without any hope of amelioration or change. And if it is true, as H. G. Wells has significantly indicated, that our present civilization is a "race between education and catastrophe", then, as long as such slavery exists, humanity is irrevocably doomed.

It is imperative, therefore, to become roused not merely by the pope's Encyclical which, after all, refers only to his own subjects, and if they, of their own volition, choose to recognize the infallibility of their church, our liberal traditions must grant to them that freedom which we have ever craved; hopeful, however, that ultimately no citadel, no matter how firmly buttressed or bolted, can resist the onward march of science and man's awakened mind. What we must resist with all our heart and soul and might, are those forces that limit their power and influence and sway, not merely to themselves, but who, through the state of which we are all inalienably equal citizens, would foist upon us their particular views and prevent the free expression of our own. At least, the Pope had the courage to affirm what blind patriotism and credulous loyalty never dare deny. He had the spiritual candour to say that "the child is not the mere creature of the state. Those who nurture him and direct his destiny have the right, coupled with the high duty, to recognize and prepare him for additional obligation."

Just what sort of "additional obligation" the Pope implies, we know not. We hope he meant the obligation to be a free citizen of the world, an internationally-minded, peace-loving, intellectually emancipated, and spiritually profound patriot and champion of all Humanity.

PECULIAR

Isaac arrived home one night, tired from a fast drive in an attempt to escape an approaching storm.

"The lightning was the most peculiar I ever encountered," he told his family. "It came with clock-like regularity and was not accompanied by thunder. What a country! In Roumania is was never like that!"

Then his up-to-date American children realized that he had been trying to outdrive a storm in the wake of a revolving beacon for night flying.

COMMENTARIES

By Rabbi HARRY J. STERN, of Montreal,
Associate Contributing Editor

A few fellow Zionists insist that I jot down some of my impressions of the Canadian Zionist Convention held here in Montreal last week. I do so gladly.

Generally speaking, the National Organizations presents a fairly organized body. There is no doubt about it. And for me, personally, it was a delight in every way to have met with the leaders of Zionism from every corner of the Dominion. I found most of these men and women devoted Zionists.

But no human institution is perfect. Perfection is a matter of aspiration - it is always a process of becoming. Thus in order to reach out for the perfect Zionist organization, I venture, in all humility a few suggestions, and even criticisms.

The Zionist National Council ought to have more youthful leaders. The venerable "old guard" deserve admiration for their services in the past. But an organization to be dynamic, must ever have youth with its sacrificial loyalties and passions. Otherwise, there is slight progress and very often retrogression takes place.

Generally speaking, the Zionist Organization suffers from "perpetual office holders". These perpetual office holders are responsible for the decline of Zionism. It is only the rare individual who possesses genius and talent, that can carry on the responsibilities of office from year to year with great enthusiasm. The average individual grows static, if he is permitted to hold office for any number of years.

And finally—my impression of the Canadian Zionist Organization, as I saw it in operation, is that it lacks intellectual leadership. The intelligent youth will never be attracted by a leadership, whose only claim to be at the helm, is that men have succeeded in the world of commerce, or that men write a large number of insurance policies.

As I observed the delegates and guests assembled, I found that very few of them were native Jewish Canadians. After all, the Zionist movement in Canada is certainly of age to have had a small number at least of Canadian Jews who were born in the Dominion. What is wrong? Evidently Zionism has not rooted itself in the soil of Canada. It is still a movement largely the possession of East European Jews. This state of affairs is indeed regrettable.

I rejoice to learn that my friend Mr. Louis Fitch, K.C. lifted the Convention to great spiritual heights by his thoughtful address at the opening session. More men like unto Mr. Fitch in the Zionist Organization would give dignity and magnetism to the Zionist movement here in Canada.

I regret on the other hand that Mr. Bernard Richards, the genial author of the "Discourses of Keidansky", had to travel such a distance from New York to deliver himself of a phrase such as—"Dr. Magnes is the play boy of the Eastern World". It is a meaningless phrase. It is far from being a valid criticism of Dr. Magnes. How would my friend Mr. Richards like to be characterized, as "the play boy of the American Jewish Congress?"

The convention is now a memory. I hope to renew my friendship with the large number of delegates that I had the privilege of meeting. My greetings to them! May they work with zeal for a Palestine Redeemed!

FAITH

This may be an age of reason. But it is very difficult to reason out the mystery of life. Faith is necessary; without faith life loses its consecration. God is certainly a matter of faith. The following lines of Professor Santayana express my sentiment:

"Oh! world, thou choosest not the better part,
It is not wisdom to be only wise,
And on the inward vision close the eyes;
But it is wisdom to believe the heart.
Columbus found a world and had no chart
Save one that Faith deciphered in the skies;
To trust the soul's invincible surmise
Was all his science and his only art.
Our knowledge is a torch of smoky pine
That lights the pathway but one step ahead
Across the void of mystery and dread.
Bid then the tender light of Faith to shine
By which alone the mortal heart is led
Into the thinking of the thought Divine."

Entirely New Line of Durant Cars is Announced
Beauty with Performance

The new 6-14, an entirely new line of automobiles just announced by Durant Motors of Canada, Limited, promises to command a high place in public interest this year.

Referred to as a classic in the medium-price six cylinder field, the 6-14 is distinctly different in body and chassis design and construction—in fact, those who have seen and driven this new car are highly enthusiastic regarding its appearance, refinements, riding comfort and performance, and unhesitatingly declare it a triumph of Durant engineering genius. It is indeed a car destined to enhance the Durant reputation for in-built quality and dependability.

Viewing the 6-14 from a distance, an observer gains a most favorable impression of length, lowness and grace. The body presents a custom-built appearance. From the sweeping lines and curves, the eye is attracted to the flying spear point hood louvres which strike a distinctive note in hood design. This spear point motif is carried throughout the art treatment of the entire car, thus creating a harmonized beauty effect. It is impressed upon the chrome plated headlamps, parking lamps, radiator cap, crank hole cover, door handles and on the rear deck handle of the coupe and roadster. Inside, the motif appears on the brightly polished door lock controls, window regulators, robe rails, cord mountings, instrument panels and fittings.

The Durant shield, with a background of red, black and white enamel illuminating the name "Durant" adds a nice touch to the dignified appearance of the newly-designed chrome plated radiator. The shield is also reproduced on the bumper bar clamps and is embossed on the highly polished aluminum alloy hub caps.

Careful attention to the smallest details, that is everywhere evident in the body fittings, is equally apparent in the harmony of color schemes and fine upholstery materials.

Wide doors provide easy access to roomy interiors. When seated the passenger finds ample headroom and leg room. Seat cushions are so moulded and placed to ensure a feeling of restfulness. Proper location of the seats in relation to the slender steel pillars makes visibility exceptionally good.

The V-V type windshield is slightly inclined in order to prevent reflections and glare.

Front seats of the sedan, coupe, de luxe sedan, de luxe coupe and roadster are easily adjustable fore and aft to meet individual requirements of different drivers. The seat control mechanism is simple and easy to operate.

In design and construction, the body of the new 6-14 is a radical departure from the average type. Durant engineers have successfully combined the structural strength of all-steel body with certain inherent advantages of wood. The entire con

SALADA HAS ITS BIGGEST YEAR

According to a statement made by Mr. Gerald Larkin, president of the Salada Tea Company of Canada Limited, the increase in sales in Canada and the United States indicates that over 710,000 more people were using Salada than in 1928.

The occasion was the convention of the Ontario Salada salesmen at the Royal York Hotel, Toronto.

Mr. Arthur M. Wilson was in the chair and gave an exceedingly interesting address complimenting the salesmen on the year's work and calling upon them for continued efforts. Sales Manager, Mr. J. J. Wholley, whose efforts were largely responsible for the increase in Ontario, made a forceful appeal for further co-operation. After an interesting address on "Enthusiasm" by sales supervisor, Mr. Frank Nicholson, the meeting was thrown open for general discussion.

Zionist Convention Re-Elects Officers

No permanent or general anti-Jewish or anti-Zionist feeling was expressed by the recent Arab uprising in Palestine, Samuel Dayan, who has been a resident of that country for many years, told the twenty-second national convention of the Zionist Organization of Canada at their meeting in the Mount Royal Hotel Monday, January 20. A small group of perhaps two hundred illiterate and for the most part self-expatriated, effendi fanned fanatical sentiment in a handful of untutored Arabs until they decided to raid the Jewish population, more for the right to commit vandalism and prosper thereby than for religious fervor, which only provided the license, the speaker declared, pointing out that in the end less than 2,000 Arabs of the 600,000 who inhabit Palestine took part.

The majority of the Arabs are in favor of the operations of the Zionist body simply because it is to their advantage, and to that of Palestine in general, that these operations should continue, the speaker said. Vast sums of money flow into the country through their activities, and those who have the interest of the country at heart understand that not only its Jewish population is likely to prosper thereby. Under the protective hand of the British Government and through the assistance given by Zionists the world over, the future of the country becomes more and more interesting.

Mr. Dayan spoke of the love of the country in the hearts of those Jews who held land there, in their traditional home, and he appealed to his audience to assist in the work of the Zionists, so often responsible for their repatriation. Land is to be had without any difficulty, he declared, and all that is necessary is the co-operation of those interested in the work. Mr. Dayan spoke in Yiddish.

Officers elected; A. J. Freiman, of Ottawa, being re-elected to the presidency of the Canadian Organization for his tenth consecutive term by a unanimous vote; Mark Workman, of Montreal, was again elected to the position of honorary president; Lyon Cohen, and Rabbi H. Abramowitz, of Montreal; E. Pullan, of Toronto; M. J. Finkelstein and H. E. Wilder, of Winnipeg, honorary vice-presidents. Vice-presidents are Louis Fitch, K.C., of Montreal, M. Gelber, of Toronto; and M. Heppner, of Winnipeg. Joseph Fineberg, of Montreal, was re-elected treasurer. Montreal members of the National Council are the presidents of Hadassah, Young Judaea and Zionist Order Habonim, and Mrs. E. G. Bernstein, M. Garber, A. Harris, Leon Goldman, I. Lande, Mrs. H. H. Livingstone, Mrs. B. Perelmuter, Marcus Sperber, G. Salomon, Joseph Cohen, K.C., M.L.A., I. Cohen, R. A. Darwin, Mrs. S. Kahn, Mrs. L. Miller, B. Perelmuter, L. Miller, A. H. Barin, H. Sessenwein, H. L. Sourkes, B. M. Weiner, H. Wolofsky, Max Miller, of Lachine, A. Raginsky, G. Berkon, Harry Batshaw and Dr. M. Ratner.

The chairman of the resolutions committee, H. E. Wilder, of Winnipeg, submitted a number of resolutions to the convention. Delegates approved that the Zionists Organization of Canada take steps to encourage the development of trade between Canada and Palestine and that the incoming executive appoint a commission to survey the possibilities of such trade. In another resolution, the convention expressed its sorrow at the plight of the Jewish people in Russia, and protested against the suppression of the religious life of the Russian Jews as well as against the antagonism with which their efforts to preserve the Hebrew language, as the medium of Jewish culture and the Hebraic renaissance, have met. The suppression is one that has, it was alleged, assumed such proportions that there is danger of the extinction of the cultural and spiritual resources of Russian Jewery. A resolution stated that the Zionists of Canada should accept the principle that land be granted to Legionnaires in Palestine. Another was that a speakers' bureau should be established in Canada for the purpose of providing lecturers and public speakers with authority on Jewish matters.

Palestine Urged as Jewish Home By Convention

The twenty-second national convention of the Zionist Organization of Canada opened Sunday Morning January 19th, at the Mount Royal Hotel. The opening session was marked by the unanimous adoption of a resolution deploring the failure of the local administration of Palestine to take sufficient precautions to prevent the outbreak of the riots or proceed with the necessary rapidity and effectiveness to quell them. The resolution at the same time expressed Canadian Jewry's confidence and loyalty to the mandatory power, Great Britain, reiterating the hope that it will continue to carry out in spirit and in letter the terms of the Palestine mandate.

"The task of the British Government, acting as the trustee of the League of Nations, was to see that this state was governed justly and wisely," A. J. Freiman, of Ottawa, president of the Zionist organization, stated in his address, "and to see that life and property were safe, that all races received justice, and that the traditions and memories of their religious and their customs were not wounded. As yet these conditions of the mandate have not been ensured. But there is one thing the mandate has done. It has given us the assurance of Great Britain, and on this assurance we have built a Yishuv—a Yishuv of progressive colonies and thriving urban settlements."

Strong emphasis was laid by the president, upon the progress Palestine has recorded since Jewish occupation, for the Jews, he said, had improved the economic situation and given new life to a country that only

In personal estima...on, the Jewish people would not ... as good citizens, as good mem...rs of the British Empire, if they ...d not have in their hearts this ...eat ambition for a homeland. By their energy and sheer determination to achieve this object they have proved themselves important members of the British Empire."

H. L. Sourkes, chairman of the convention committee, who presided, said the "Arab outbreaks in Palestine had served to fire world Jewry with greater determination to achieve its object.

Tribute to Canadian Jewry for the enthusiam and energy that marked their efforts towards the ideal of Zionism was paid by Bernard G. Richard, of New York, executive director of the American Jewish Congress, aspirations for a homeland were lauded by the speaker, who pointed out that faith was the strength of Zionism and Zionism will stand if the Jewish faith stands. He strongly criticized Dr. Judah L. Magnes, chancellor of the Hebrew University of Palestine, for having advocated Jewry's abandonment of Zionism, terming Dr. Magnes the "Jewish spoilt play-boy of the Western World."

Rabbi J. L. Zlotnick read congratulatory messages from world-wide Jewry to Canadian Jews upon the occasion of the Zionist convention, and also presented in Yiddish a review of past Zionist activities. Reports were presented by M. Gelbot, vice-president of the central division; M. Heppner, vice-president of the western division; Mrs. Louis Fitch, vice-president of the Hadassah; R. A. Darwin, supreme Nassi of the Habonim, and A. M. Klein, educational director of the Young Judaea. The financial report, presented by Joseph Fineberg, treasurer, showed that the total receipts since June 7, 1927, to December 31, 1929, for the Zionist Organization of Canada, Incorporated, were $733,297.18, of which some of the larger contributions to the various funds are: Keren Hayesod, $100,441.75; United Palestine Appeal, $285,985.52; Palestine Emergency Fund, $136,479.52; Hadassah, $93,324.87; Jewish National Fund, $92,272.89; miscellaneous, $23,792.63. Total expenses were $127,909.94, divided as follows: Dominion office, $89,439.77; Toronto office, $13,309.17; Winnipeg office, $11,867.97; Hadassah, $4,130.95, and Young Judaea, $9,162.08. "Regarding the immediate future," the report said, "Our position is not of the brightest, due to the collapse of the financial markets with its depressing effect and to the recent disturbances in Palestine, which, in itself, necessitated an emergency relief campaign in Canada, for which purpose a sum of $136,479.52 was raised in cash, all of which has already been forwarded to headquarters. Both of these temporary setbacks, however, should in no way dampen our enthusiasm, but on the contrary only make us redouble our efforts.

A formal reception to delegates, coupled with a buffet supper, was held in the ball-room of the Mount Royal Hotel Sunday evening. The ball-room was decorated Zionist flags gracing the walls, with the Union Jack and the Canadian flag. There were approximately 1,000 members of various Canadian-Jewish communities in attendance.

FRASER COMPANIES

The 150 ton per day bleached sulphite pulp mill which is under construction by Fraser's Companies wholly owned subsidiary, Restigouche Company, is rapidly nearing completion. It is expected to be in operation on or about February 15.

It is anticipated that the company's 1929 report will not show as high earnings as had been expected. This is due substantially to increased interest and depreciation charges, arising out of its new mills, and which have taken more time to put in commercial operation than had been expected. It is thought, however, that the company will show earnings substantially in excess of its fixed charges, although it will not show it earned its common stock dividend payment of which was deferred some weeks ago.

INTERNATIONAL PAPER

Whilst the exact date has not been set, it is anticipated that the new mill of International Paper Company, now being completed at Dalhousie, N. B., will be opened early in February. Extensive plans are being made to have a very complete representation of public men and business interests of the Maritimes and outside points present, two special trains being run from St. John, among those to be in attendance also being a party of New York officials.

This will mark the second big event of this nature in the Maritimes within recent weeks, the other occasion being the opening of the Mersey Mills at Liverpool, N. S.

WINNIPEG ELECTRIC

"Net income of Winnipeg Electric Company for 1929 is 50 per cent greater than that for 1928" stated Edward Anderson, K. C., president of the Winnipeg Electric Company who has been in Montreal.

Mr. Anderson's visit to Montreal was in connection with the forthcoming financing of Northwestern Power Company, Limited, which company is developing the Seven Sisters Falls site, the largest development on the Winnipeg River.

ROBERT MITCHELL CO.

Work of bringing to completion the new foundry of the Robert Mitchell Company, Limited, at St-Laurent, near Montreal, has been carried forward with considerable despatch, and the new unit is now virtually complete. It is stated that from now on increases in daily production may be expected.

Financing to take care of this development was provided through the issuance some months ago of additional common stock to shareholders.

CHARLES GURD CO.

As a result of expenditures in plant extension and renovation effected during the year earnings of Charles Gurd & Co. are shown at a steady level for the fiscal period ended December 31, 1929. Earnings on the common stock were equal to $3.11 a share as compared with $2.98 for the previous year.

Net profits for the period at $207,645 compare with $207,017 in 1928 dividends on the remaining preferred stock outstanding took $21,000 as against $27,959 the preceding year leaving a net available on the common stock of $186,645. From this was deducted common dividends of $120,000 leaving a surplus of $66,645 to which was added a previous surplus of $157,441 leaving a profit and loss balance to be carried forward of $224,086 comparing with $157,442 in 1928.

Little Chance For Higher Prices On Newsprint This Year

TAKEN as a group the newsprint stocks present little opportunity for profit making over the next twelve months. For a time, the attempt to bring about a $5. increase in the price of newsprint had a bullish effect on prices, but the breaking down of negotiations, put back the stocks to where they were, and even lower, before the new price was announced.

While it is true that production has increased and demand from American publishers has been larger than ever, there is little profit to be made at prevailing prices. It will be recalled that reports of the different companies for 1928, which covered a year of uncertainty, showed that few more than earned their bond interest and preferred dividend requirements.

For the year just passed, conditions were more favorable, but with newsprint at $55.20 a ton, it is expected that earnings available for distribution to the common stock shareholders will be negligible. Those companies with a diversified output, such as Price Bros. should be able to hold their own, but others more dependent upon newsprint will not report any marked change in earnings.

As a hold, the outlook for the newsprint stocks is equally discouraging. Had the manufacturers acted more circumspectly in seeking a price increase, all would have been well. Increasing the price nearly 10 per cent with little notice and the frequent statements by the Premiers of Ontario and Quebec to the effect that the new price should be enforced, did not help matters. If the producers had sought for an increase of say $2. a ton this year and then raised the price another $2. at the beginning of 1931, the chances are that the publishers would have agreed to a price increase.

Though International and other companies have announced that there will be no increase in the price of newsprint for the first half of 1930 and that any increase in the latter half of the year, will be announced some thirty days beforehand. It is doubtful if any increase can be put into effect this year. Certainly the position of the publishers is stronger than ever against any attempt to bring about higher prices.

This opinion is general among those who have followed the activities of the Canadian newsprint industry. While most of them are ready to look upon the bright side of things, few have any expectations that an increase will be brought about this year. It may be that summary action will be taken by the provincial governments to that end, but the last attempt clearly showed the inadvisability of any pressure from governmental sources.

Mining & Oil

CONSOLIDATED SMELTERS

Production figures for the year 1929 issued by Consolidated Mining & Smelting Company show that except in the case of zinc, output of the various metals fell off appreciably as compared with 1928, when production of lead, zinc and silver were at record levels.

The largest decrease was reported in production of lead, which was down 9,199 tons, while copper output fell off 4,703 tons. Zinc showed a gain of 4,284 tons, gold was down 8,929 ozs. and silver 311,598 ozs.

McINTYRE PORCUPINE

Gross income of McIntyre Porcupine Mines for the third quarter of the fiscal year ended December 31st, 1929, amounted to $1,176,049, while costs, including development were $626,128, leaving net earnings of $549,920. Taxes absorbed $25,632, leaving net earnings before depreciation $523,288, compared with $498,362 in the previous quarter.

For the nine months period ended December 31st, gross income was $3,351,522, an increase of $139,663 over the corresponding period last year. Costs, including development were $1,802,238 leaving net earnings of $1,492,814. Provision for taxes was $86,453 and net before depreciation was $1,462,831 as against $1,412,552 a year ago, an increase of $50,412.

ARNO MINES

Putting through a tunnel from the Y to the W ore bodies, Arno on the Coxheath property has succeeded in encountering new high grade ore over the week end, which according to officials is the most promising ore yet uncovered.

The new discovery was made on the 340 foot level where work is now well underway and from where the preliminary effort of sinking to the 600 foot level has been started.

implement companies would show from operations last year. In this respect the statement of Cockshutt Plow Co. covering the same period as Massey Harris, and which revealed a favorable increase in profits, is an encouraging augury, for reports to follow.

In the case of the latter, the report of which will be published shortly, it must be remembered that operating and sales activities cover the globe. The figures emanating from other U. S. companies are significant in that Massey has wide interests in that country.

C. W. LINDSAY

Unofficial estimates as to the operating results of C. W. Lindsay this year place the amount likely to be shown as earned on the total common stock at between $6. and $7. per share. With such a showing there is a disposition to feel that the present dividend of $1. a share on the common is likely to be added to within a short time. In well-informed circles it is stated several directors favor an increase and it would not be surprising if some action were taken at the next declaration date in February.

FORD OF CANADA

Marked increase in the 1929 sales of Ford cars and trucks to Canadians over the record for 1928 is shown by a statement issued by Wallace R. Campbell, president of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited. Domestic sales in the last year showed a decided relative increase over export sales.

The total of domestic and export sales to dealers in 1929 exceeded total sales in 1928 by more than 12,000 units.

CANADIAN CANNERS

Canadian Canners operates some 100 plants in various sections of Canada. Its widespread operations aid in maintaining output on an even keel. If there is partial crop failure in one section of the country, a short pack there can be made up elsewhere. One favorable aspect of the organization is that its business can grow very substantially, without involving any proportional additional outlay in plants.

The fiscal year of the company has been changed to February 28th so that the next annual report will cover 14 months. It is reported authoritatively that the company will show a favorable increase in profits.

BRADING BREWERIES

Further expansion in earnings and plant is shown in the annual financial statement of Brading Breweries, Limited, of Ottawa, for the fiscal year ended November 30th, 1929. For the year under review net available on the common stock was equal to $5.09 a share as compared with $1.97 in 1928 and $1.64 in 1927.

JAMAICA PUBLIC SERVICE

The statement of earnings of the Jamaica P. S. Corporation for the month of November shows an increase in net of $6,497 over the corresponding period last year. The 12 months showing indicates an appreciation of $33,536.

CONSOLIDATED BAKERIES

In the past fiscal year Consolidated Bakeries have rounded out their organization by the acquisition of further groups of bakeries across the Dominion and announcement of the new units will probably be made at the annual general meeting of shareholders to be held in a month or so. Earnings for the year ended in December last were entirely satisfactory to the management and sufficient to meet the annual dividend requirement of $2. a share and permit of an addition to surplus. The annual financial statement is in the course of preparation and will be all the more interesting in that it will be the first report of the consolidated companies.

NEWBEC MINES

One rumor was which accorded a degree of credence recently was to the effect that Newbec had only about $30,000 left in the treasury and that they had succeeded in getting an extra block of stock underwritten at 50 cents per share. This was denied by the president T. H. Rea, who stated that the terms of the original financing keeps the company in excellent position. The underwriters are taking up stock periodically at such times as their payments fall due.

INTERNATIONAL NICKEL

A good deal of the buying of Nickel in recent days is reported to have come from London and continental Europe. It is stated that renewed interest in the stock is due to statements in authoritative circles that late developments have been highly constructive, that not only has the final quarter of 1929 been extraordinarily good, but in the annual report the management will have an impressive story to tell, not only regarding mine developments but the expansion in the markets for nickel which is so vital a factor in the company's future earning power.

WRIGHT HARGREAVES

Diamond drilling from 2,000 feet in depth on Wright-Hargreaves has indicated rich ore at around 3,000 feet in depth. As nearly as can be estimated, the vein at that point has a width of some seven feet and is high grade. Further drilling will be done.

KIRKLAND LAKE GOLD

Work in the lower levels of Kirkland Lake Gold Mines has disclosed high-grade ore lying west of the north south diabase dike. Former calculations were based upon the high-grade lying largely east to the dike and confined to certain limits between this dike and the boundary of Teck-Hughes. The recent results have enlarged the horizon possibilities for Kirkland Lake Gold.

DOME MINES

Dome officials continue to await the results of experimental work on McIntyre before deciding upon mill construction. The process being tested at McIntyre would greatly reduce capital outlay in mill construction provided it returns a reasonable performance. Milling costs would not be appreciably altered. It is believed construction of a 1,500 plant on Dome will commence in April.

AMULET MINES

Contracts for another 10,000 feet of diamond drilling on Amulet have been let. This will include exploration work on the opposite side of the diabase dike to which "F" deposit has been found. The concentrator construction is progressing steadily and production of around $2,000,000 annually will be attained from the grade of ore now in sight. By mid-year it is believed that the enterprise will be on a reasonably profitable basis, the grade of ore being around $25. per ton, with indications of a big margin of profit later on.

FALCONBRIDGE NICKEL

At the annual meeting of Falconbridge Nickel Mines it was stated that recent diamond drilling had indicated another 500,000 tons of ore between the 1,000 and 1,500 ft. level, and within the limits of only 1,000 feet in length. This carries the inference that there is $45,000,000 now indicated in the first 1500 feet in depth and in a length of only 1000 feet as compared with a known length of some 7,500 feet of ore zone. The financial statement shows Ventures Ltd. to have secured a still larger number of shares in Falconbridge with 1,536,770 already owned and held outright by Ventures and with Ventures holding an option on a further 550,000 shares at $10. and $12. per share over a period of two or three years.

Editor,
Canadian Jewish Review,

I would ask you to be kind enough to insert this in your valuable paper. The Canadian Jewish Farm School, Georgetown, Ontario, has been in existence for the last five yeras, and its aims and objects are, to promote agriculture amongst the Jewish People. During this period of time there has been a large number of students (Canadians as well as Europeans) enrolled, and I am glad to be able to report to the Jewish people they have made a splendid showing. Some of them have bought farms of their own and a large percentage are engaged at farm work. In the last two years we have brought over two groups of orphans, forty-three in the first group, and thirty in the last.

When I think of the assistance we have received from the Canadian Jewry, I wonder how we have ever existed so long and got along so well. It is beyond me why our people are deaf to this worthy cause. On several occasions I have tried to interest the leaders of Canadian Jewry, to take an active part, but have failed.

We have been often told in this country that we must give our percentage to agriculture as well as the others, and with the Farm School located here in Georgetown we could certainly help do our part. Living in Canada and knowing the basic industry is farming, is all the more reason why our people should help promote agriculture, and here is their chance.

We are at present experiencing financial difficulties and we will be compelled to close the School's doors if assistance is not forthcoming immediately. I may say in this letter it will be the fault of every Jew in Canada and especially our leaders if we allow a thing like this to happen. It will greatly interfere with our prestige and citizenship in Canada. It will prove that 150,000 Jews in Canada are not able to establish a farm organization to promote agriculture among the Jewish People.

Before closing the doors I have decided to make a final appeal, through the press, to the Jewish people and I would suggest that a general meeting be called and once and for all decide the fate of the School. If anyone has any suggestion to offer I would be pleased to hear from him.

Yours very truly,
M. Saxe.

"Sometimes when people censure me,
I tell them without rancor,
That for what it cost me to be free,
I might have had an anchor."

Three Jews have been urged by various delegations upon the federal government as a selection from which to appoint one man to the Canadian Senate for life. Although they are all personally unknown to this column they may be described upon gentle hearsay something as follows: One is S. W. Jacobs, member of the Dominion Parliament for Montreal, and the first Jew ever elected to the Dominion Parliament. He is a lawyer of many years' practice and said to be a man of suavity and charm, culture and impressive bearing. He is prominent in general communal life as well as Jewish and knows all the ropes in Liberal politics. Another man is A. J. Freiman, sometimes referred to as millionaire department store owner of Ottawa, sometimes as merchant prince, sometimes as president of the Canadian Zionist Organization, usually with some reference to his generosity in connection with philanthropic and social movements or causes. In politics Mr. Freiman is a Conservative and this fact may rule him out. The third man is Max Clavir, of Toronto, owner or one of the owners of the Hebrew Journal, a Yiddish newspaper of the antediluvian type. Mr. Clavir is not prominent in that section of Jewish Toronto generally recognized as the representative class. Just what his qualifications are for the senatorship for life at $4,000 a year do not seem clear. Of the three S. W. Jacobs would appear to be the best choice. At present writing no man has been appointed. If one is appointed it will be the first time a Jew ever sat in the Canadian Senate.

With all this talk about the possible appointment of a Jewish senator whispers of fame flew through Canada. Telegrams and long distance telephone calls, here and yon, even into the depths of the north and the wide open spaces of the west ate up the miles between henchmen and sub-henchmen and between boss and lesser bosses anywhere. In the piteous plea and scramble for influential pressure there can be nothing but humility and no tiny grain is too small to be of use. So from the provincial centres and sequestered marts of trade little men emerge in more heroic size. They make artful efforts on behalf of some distant importance beyond their horizon in exchange for that momentary grand and glorious feeling of being pretty instrumental in big affairs. It must be a potent, heady sensation, a sort of dope. Milt Gross's Count Screwloose from Tooloose, escaped for the time from the insane asylum and observing the folly of plain men and the abberations of the sane, would return as usual as quickly as possible to his keeper and cry out: "Iggy, keep an eye on me!"

At the risk of committing the crime of generalizing this column insists there is nothing like the vanity of men, certainly not the comparatively meagre vanity of women. A vain woman poses in front of the mirror and sees herself through the kindest eyes in the world but her vanity does not permeate her entire behaviour. She waits to be asked for her picture for publication and may have to be coaxed. A man will send in his photograph or employ some indebted intermediary to bring it in and request that it appear with a blinding description of his communal position and myriad achievements. A Zionist Convention where there is nothing pressing to talk about must be held anyway as an opportunity for allowing the male ego to expand to the limit and the male himself to strut about lobbies and bask in complete pompousness. His women folks are at home where they belong waiting for him to return as they should. He will go home and tell them he was a somebody at the convention and they will regard him as a somebody should be regarded.

Figuratively, if not physically, as in older times, the Jewish wife is still walking three or six paces behind her husband, fairly respectfully. Meanwhile Jewish women forego one of the pleasures of life due them when they neglect to laugh at their husbands to their faces and teach them to laugh, too, and take it with good humor moreover and an eye for the ridiculous. There should be smothered laughter at least at the sight of men travelling miles and miles to take part in vast doings that are not vast while the women stay at home and accomplish all the hard work for the Zionist cause. The men do nothing but puff and blow and eat up credit. The women collect money by benefits, raffles, bazaars and in Toronto—under the leadership of a sturdy czarina. Year in and year out in that city the crown remains on the same imperious head while hundreds of meek, modest women serve quietly, obediently, diligently, getting little or no recognition, and developing no new leaders because there can't be room for many under an oligarchy. The most the majority can expect is the deep, abiding peace they may find in working for a cause and piling up credit to the account of a dictator. This would just be breakfast food for the men. Preferment is the one item in organization work that means meat to them.

assembly with the corner pillars and the forward roof rail, sedan centre pillars, wheel housing, rear kick-up sill construction and doors are all steel. Wood is used only for such parts as main body sills, roof rails, seat and rear window framing, etc.

Exceptional strength and safety are outstanding characteristics of the cowl and front pillar assembly, on which most of the body stresses and strains are concentrated. Corner pillars are built of two pressed steel channel members securely welded and riveted together to form a rigid strong box-section.

The all-steel floors are proof against sagging or warping and in conjunction with the sturdy well-braced pillar and body frame construction, fit snugly and close evenly. Drumming, squeaks, creaks and rattles are reduced to a minimum.

The new chassis presents a particularly clean cut appearance. The frame begins to taper from maximum depth at the rear hangers of the front spring, ensuring super strength and rigidity where the heaviest strains are received. The entire frame is reinforced with five specially designed cross-members.

The engine in the new 6-14 is larger and more powerful. It is mounted in unit construction with a multiple spring, rubber-cushioned single plate clutch and three speed transmission. The motor is tilted back at an angle to give a straight line drive from crank shaft to rear axle under normal loading. The tubular propeller shaft employs two all metal, enclosed type universal joints. In the rubber engine mounting a layer of live, resilient rubber is secured firmly by vulcanization between two parallel steel plates. This acts as a vibration dampener and shock absorbing engine support. The difference between a support of this kind and one under compression is comparable to the difference between a solid tire and a pneumatic tire. You can notice the difference as soon as this easy-riding car gets under way. There is no tendency to "shimmy" or "tramp" at any speed on any kind of roadway.

The bore and stroke in the 6-14 engine is 3 1/4 x 4 inches, giving a piston displacement of 189 cubic inches. The new "Pyrodyne" cylinder head gives a compression ratio of 5.3 to 1 without detonation.

The ignition unit of the 6-14 is located above the cylinder head, at the upper end of the same shaft that drives the oil pump. This gives easy accessibility, with better protection and shorter wires to the spark plugs.

Fuel feed from the 10 gallon tank at the rear of the chassis is by positively driven diaphragm pump, feeding through a gasoline filter.

The invar strut, aluminum alloy pistons are each fitted with three compression rings and one oil control ring. Piston pins float in connecting rod and piston boss.

The carburetor is the latest improved plain tube type. An important feature is the positive acting accelerating device which provides snappy acceleration at any speed, under any operating condition. Another feature is the economizer which permits operation through the normal driving range on an economical, lean mixture, yet automatically supplies a rich, powerful mixture when required for hill climbing or heavy pulling. In conjunction with the "Pyrodyne" cylinder head exceptional fuel economy is secured.

A few minutes behind the wheel of the new 6-14 gives you another pleasant surprise. It steers so easily and smoothly. There are several reasons for this. Road shocks are not transmitted back to the steering wheel. The steering gear ratio is 14½ to 1 and the slender three-spoke 17-inch

Health Service

STAMMERING

Speech is the medium of human in- course. In order to succeed in life, require to give an account of selves, to express our thoughts our ideas clearly. It is through aight-forward, normal, standard eech that we sell our services to ers. Desirable as it is that speech free from errors in grammar, and t it command a good choice of ds, it is much more important t it be unhampered by such de- ts as stuttering and stammering. bout the fourth day of life, the d begins to hear; at the end of first month he recognizes sounds. imitates sounds at the end of third month. At the beginning, babbles sounds which are gen- lly incomprehensible, although the d parents and relatives may find eaning in them which is not real- there. During the child's second , words are used correctly by , and the third year sees him ding words to form phrases.

ormal speech is a good and de- ble habit to acquire and is the duct of proper training. Like most its, that of normal speech is ned in the earliest years of life. wrong habit must be overcome the longer it is allowed to con- e, the more firmly is it fixed the more difficult is it to over- e and replace with the correct desirable habit.

ever use baby talk to a baby. ays speak correctly and distinct- to him. Baby talk may be at- ctive in a baby, but it is a de- ive form of speech which may me deeply ingrained as a habit, . If allowed to persist into adult e, it is far from being desirable.

The child who is emotional or what is called "nervous" is apt to stutter, particularly if he plays with a child who stutters.

If a speech defect does develop, it must not be mimicked or laughed at. Have the child speak slowly and deliberately so that he will gain confidence in his ability to speak properly. The whole life of the child should be made leisurely and easy. The important point in the prevention of speech defects is always to speak slowly and correctly to the baby, and correcting defects in speech before they become habits. Correct speech is chiefly the result of imitation, and parents should realize their responsibilities in this respect.

WHY SHOULD BIRTHS BE REGISTERED?

There is a law in every province which requires the registration of births, and, as a rule, the partial responsibility for such registration rests upon the parent. Whether or not the parents are held responsible by law, they should see that the provincial requirements are met because, for the following reasons, it is in the interest of the new-born child that the birth be registered.

It is through the registration of births and deaths that a check is kept upon health conditions. The cause of deaths, the undue prevalence of disease, the results of health work can only be ascertained from such figures. The public health organization depends upon these statistics, and as its efficiency is a matter of importance to each individual, in that protection from disease and the attainment of health depend so largely upon this public service, each citizen should do his part in seeing that such necessary reports as birth registrations are made to the proper authorities.

If the child's birth is not registered, he may be hampered in adult life, because birth certificates are now demanded for:

1. Proof of citizenship, in order to have the right to vote; to obtain a passport for travelling outside the country;

2. Proof of age: this is required by insurance companies before claims can be settled; as evidence of a child's having reached school age; as evidence of age where work certificates are required, or to prove that age when work certificate is required has been passed; to prove age for enlistment in the army; to prove age in connection with marriage;

3. Establishment of identity and parentage; to prove right to an inheritance.

Many more reasons might be given, such as age for a motor driver's license, and age for old age pension, but enough have been mentioned to established clearly that from the standpoint of both the community and the individual, birth registration should never be neglected. A moral and legal obligation rests upon parents to see that the birth of their child is properly registered.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College Street, Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

KITCHENER, ONT.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Norris and family celebrated the engagement of their niece, Rose, to Irving Somers, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Somers, of Kitchener. The out-of-town guests were: Mr. J. Harins of London, Mr. and Mrs. J. Wolfhard, of Guelph; and Mr. and Mrs. B. Joseph and daughter, of Toronto.

Sherbrooke, Que.

Bnai Brith Sherbrooke held a dinner and their installation of officers Wednesday night, January 8th., at the New Sherbrooke House, in honour of David Ruslander, of Buffalo, president of District Grand Lodge No. 1. At the head table were: Mr. Ruslander; Abraham D. Smith retiring president; Chas. B. Howard, M.P., Sherbrooke County; J. S. Tetrault, Mayor of Sherbrooke; Lionel J. Coviensky, District Deputy, and Jack Kindestin, 1st. vice-president, Mount Royal Lodge No. 729. both of Montreal; past-president, Samuel W. Smith, Louis H. Bernstein, Joseph Schwartz, Joseph Rosenbloom, M. B. Echenberg and Sol Niloff. Officers were installed by Mr. Ruslander assisted by Mr. Coviensky. Those installed were: Sol Niloff, president; Joseph Schwartz, vice-president; Louis Bernstein, second vicepresident; Benjman Cohen, treasurer; past president, Samuel W. Smith, Secretary; Abraham D. Smith, Monitor; B. Arbitman, Assistant-Monitor; Rev. A. Mittleman, M. B. Echenberg, Manuel Smith, Trustees; S. Weinstein, Warden; and Leon Schacter, Guardian.

D. P. Diplock and Ernest Armitage gave solos. Gault Parker was accompanist. Lionel J. Coviensky and Abraham D. Smith were joint chairmen.

Mr. Russlander expressed the hope that all fair-minded people in Canada and the United States would use their influence towards combating the proposed liquor enforcement scheme of the United States Treasury, which would mean the massing of troops along the border.

High praise was paid the Jewish citizens by Mayor J. S. Tetreault, Sherbrooke, he said, was a cosmopolitan city, and the good relations existing between its citizens of all nationalities is an example to the whole Dominion. Regret was expressed by Mayor Tetreault that there were no Jews numbered among the councillors of the city at the present time, but he hoped that in the near future the Jewish population of this city would share in the administration of its civic affairs.

"Canada has never adopted the principle of making steam-roller Canadians," said C. B. Howard, M.P., in pointing out that the members of all creeds were allowed absolute freedom to worship as they pleased. In this way true Canadian citizenship had been founded, he stated, and the people of different faiths discovered that the other fellow was just as good as he was, even if his religion was different. Billingualism, too, played a part in knitting people of Canada together, for with French and English as official languages each member of the two races in this country realized that he was treated fairly.

NORTHERN ONTARIO CANADA

Northern Ontario, now open for settlement at fifty cents per acre contains millions of acres of the finest agricultural land in the world. Its resources in lumber, minerals, water power, fish, game and scenery are immense. The land calls for men to cultivate it, and in return will give health, comfort and prosperity.

What settlers say of the soil, climate, farming, and forest wealth is told in a most attractive booklet issued under the direction of the Honourable John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. Full instructions in regards to acquiring a title to these rich agricultural lands are also given.

For free copies write: G. A. ELLIOTT, Director of Colonization, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, Ontario.

The Island Within

A Novel by Ludwig Lewisohn

By arrangement with HARPER and BROTHERS, Copyright.

Next he remembered how, especially in winter, he had played all by himself, and in his mind the game that the house with his father and mother and Hazel and the two maids in it was a fortress in a lonely waste, protected by a moat and a drawbridge and provisioned for months and years, and how, from this imagined situation, there had come to him a lovely feeling both of adventure and of snugness and security. In the early evenings of winter, when the lights had just been lit, he had withdrawn all by himself into a corner of the litle playroom between his sister's bedroom and his own and snuggled down there on a cushion and hugged this feeling of security in a menacing world to his childish breast. . . .

More striking, though neither as delightful nor as comforting as this recollection which warmed his heart even in his adolescent years, was the clear memory of a birthday party that his mother had given for him. It had been in April, of course, and a whiff of flowers and cake had been in the house, and in the afternoon he and Hazel had waited, in their best clothes, for their guests. That was, it seemed to Arthur, his first conscious vision of that familiar group. First had come his cousins, Eugene and Harry Adams; next the Goldmann children, a little boisterous and pell-mell: Sally and Esther and Joe and Victor; and last, in one of the earliest motor-cars seen, accompanied not by their mother, but by their French governess, Ethel and Genevieve Freefield. Bright colors he remembered and gifts, and the queer smell of the paint on some elaborate wooden toy brought by the Freefield girls, and the terrible painfulness of having to be a little gentleman and thank his guests for their gifts, and a sudden access of rage he had had because Hazel, who hadn't learned her letters yet, was playing roughly and as it had seemed to him, senselessly with some books that had been given him. Last, after the chocolate and the cake, as the afternoon was waning, it appears that he and little Esther Goldmann had been found in a corner of the long drawing-room with their arms about each other, and had been pulled out and teased and laughed at for some reason that neither of them understood. Then supper and sleepiness and bed and his mother coming in for a good-night kiss and putting her white, plump hand with the amethyst ring on his forehead and wondering if it didn't feel too hot. . . .

VII

How was it that, before they went to school, always and always, as far back as the awakening of consciousness, the children knew that they were Jews? This was a subject on which Arthur speculated not a few times in the later years. There was in the house no visible symbol of religion and of race. Had the house been emptied of its inhabitants, to be let furnished, for instance, there would have been nothing in it to differentiate it from the house of Protestant Americans. There were a few German books of Gertrude's. But these, too, had neither Jewish content nor association. Arthur was quite sure on one point, at all events, and that point was the crucial one, that when he was old enough to understand certain definite remarks that betrayed a Jewish consciousness, he already knew, consented, was nowise astonished nor tempted to ask. Such remarks in the household were few enough. They were usually made by his father and usually amounted to this, that one must not expect too much of So-and-So and So-and-So or trust them too completely, as far as one's most intimate affairs were concerned, because the people in question were Goyim. The corresponding remark was that such and such people could be approached, such and such a physician called in, such and such a merchant trusted because they were Yehudim. And it was distinctly clear to Arthur, from the beginning of his reasoning life on, that these judgments involved no absolute moral values. They meant that the decentest Gentile was apt to relax his ethical vigilance in dealing with a Jew and that the shabbiest Jew was apt to rise above his lower level when dealing with a fellow Jew. At times Arthur was to repudiate these judgments heartily and even fiercely later on. He was sure that he had made no mistake as to their character and quality from the beginning. He continued to search his memory for other and outward visible methods by which the consciousness of being Jews had crept into his sister's mind and into his own. He found none. Something he had to leave, at his most hostile and rebellious moments, to ancestral memories, to instinct, to the voice of the blood.

Neither was he ever able to estimate how far these early impressions might have been obliterated by life in a various and forgetful world. For on this one point the world was strict and mindful from the moment of one's first contact with it. On his second day in school, from the low form ahead of him, there was suddenly turned a small round screwed-up gargoyle face, red, freckled, pug-nosed, blue-eyed, with crimson tongue stuck far out and hot against the lovely, fair chin. Then the tongue slid, like a quick little round animal, back into its hole and he heard a hot whisper, "Sheenie!" . . . Was it again the voice of the blood? For Arthur was sure that he had never heard that word before. But neither had he any doubt as to its meaning and character. So sure was he, and so hurt, and so rebellious against that hurt which had leaped suddenly at him in a world hitherto all security and tenderness and peace, that, instead of relating the incident at home, he told his mother that there was a nice little boy in his class whose name was Georgie Fleming. . . .

One doesn't reflect at six. But to Arthur the immense value of this incident and this childish reaction lay precisely in their unreflectiveness. The instinctive gesture involved was evidently on the part of the child that he then was a protective and self-protective one. He didn't want this thing with its enormous implications to be true; he wanted to shut it out. He didn't want his mother to heal his hurt, because he didn't want her or, in truth, himself, to know of it. And the reason for this was obviously that it wasn't a quick and fleeting and superficial hurt of childhood. It evidently struck a chord of inconceivably mighty and dolorous ancestral resonances. . . . Or was it too curious to consider so? The fact, the fact remained . . . as well as the indelible memory of that little red gargoyle face and of that hot whispered word. . . .

Yes, that memory clung in spite of the fact that Arthur and George got to know each other very well. And that was possible (as Arthur the child perceived and Arthur the youth recalled) because, while he remembered, little George forgot. George was quite innocent and had a lovable nature. His liking for Arthur was genuine, though casual. He did not speak to him for a whole day at school. Then he would come and kiss him in a strange bird-like little way. Arthur felt a dim childish passion for George's blithe fairness, and the terror he had at the core of him lest the gargoyle face and the hot whisper return heightened his half-tormented devotion. He asked his mother whether he might ask George Fleming to come over and play with Hazel and himself, and she gave her consent very readily. (Over-readily, Arthur thought in the later years, a little proudly at the first moment that her children were to have a nice little Christian playmate. George's father was an alderman of the city of New York. And Arthur was retrospectively ashamed of that touch of pride in his mother and did not know how many of his own impulses in the matter of human contacts were governed by a similar emotional coloring, a similar hopeless hopefulness of escape from a fate—strange contradiction if one weighs the words!—a fate that seemed, at certain periods, a mere accident, like the blue mark of a bruise received in the dark and unwilling to fade.)

Little George Fleming came to the Levy house and at first seemed shy. He stood there twisting one foot about the other and frankly sniffing the air with uplifted and suspicious little nose. He looked into corners as though he expected something to jump at him. He was extraordinarily polite, as though he had to propitiate somebody by being on his best behavior. He finally followed to the playroom and forgot himself and began to toss the toys about and to romp in a way that made Arthur nervous. Hazel didn't like it, either. But she pretended, and Arthur knew that she pretended, that she did. Georgie wanted to wrestle. He cried: "Gee! but you got a little book!" slid along the floor, pretending to make a base. Arthur and Hazel proposed playing their favorite game in which Hazel was a patient and Arthur a doctor and Hazel's dolls other patients. George looked at them wide-eyed. "Gee! what a funny game!" he cried. Then he said: "Gee! Arthur, I bet I could knock you outa that window!" and came very near succeeding. Then, red and panting a little from the struggle, he announced: "Gee! I guess pretty soon I'm goin' to be as strong as Dad! I bet I will." At this point—Arthur and Hazel were beginning to feel sleepy and a little homesick here in their own home—Mrs. Levy came in and asked the children to come downstairs for some chocolate and cake. George twisted one foot about the other again. Mrs. Levy put her white hand with the amethyst ring on the little boy's shoulder, an action which, for a moment, infuriated Arthur. . . . They all went downstairs and sat about the table in the dining-room. At first Georgie seemed afraid to touch anything. At last he took a crumb of cake—it was a home-made Morbitzer torte—and then a mouthful, and then drank his chocolate, too. Enjoyment and elation sparkled in his beautiful blue eyes. A piece of cake in his hand, his mouth almost too full for utterance, he leaned back and kicked his boots against the table and said with deep conviction: "My Dad says there's lotsa nice Jewish people. He did say."

VIII

How swiftly Arthur's childhood fled! His age of innocence, it seemed, was brief. He never remembered learning what hints dropped by a teacher in the schoolroom warmed the eternal seal of learning in his soul. He knew that by the time he was ten years old he drew books out of the Ninth Street branch of the Public Library that made the librarians look at each other with smiles, half wondering, half approving. He understood very little of what he read in these books of history and science and poetry. But from a popular text-book on astronomy he got a vision of infinite distances and dazzling globes, and from repeated dips into Gibbon a vision of marble and purple and glittering cohorts under African suns and the dark masses of riders riding through a dream over plain and mountain toward something that filled him with a nostalgia that he shared even unto childish tears. And the name of that something was Rome. . . .

He loved the books he did not understand. But sometimes he took out volumes wholly unreadable. That was on account of the youngest of the librarians, Miss Ferguson. She was kind-minded him, he never knew why, with lime-drops. She was dark. But her face was so sweet, and so serene in its sweetness. And her eyes had a golden greenish glimmer. And she admired the small boy because he was so grown-up and able to read such hard books. She would go with him to the shelves and sometimes put a hand on his shoulder or even, ever so lightly, on the nape of his neck, and then thrills would run down his spine and, though he was selecting a book of history or science he would day-dream that Miss Ferguson was being assailed by ruffians and that he was her knight whose strong sword smote and whose unerring lance drove true in her defense.

A GOOD REASON

"Look here, Morris," said the teacher, "the hair on your head is white, yet your mustache is still black."

"That's logical enough," answered Morris. "After all, the hair on my head is 18 years older than my mustache."
